HOUSE

WASHINGTON, June 3—Consideration was ...nd of the business of the morning hour, ...l amending statutes relative to the removal ...auses from state to federal courts

...r Townsend of Illinois, having withdrawn ...demand for the previous question, Mr Cox ...ade a speech in favor of repealing the test ...th laws

In course of the informal discussion Mr ...onger stated that his side of the house did not ...ntend that Mr Townsend's bill should go a ...step beyond where it was now

Mr Townsend enquired if it were true as it was everywhere whispered that it was the pur ...pose of the opposite side of the house to delay action on every bill and resolution at this sec ...tion except appropriation bills such as would put the views of the minority and president

Mr Conger without having authority to speak for the gentlemen on this side at all, said I think I may say every man on this side listens to the demand of the country that no legislation except appropriation bills shall be proceeded with We shall adjourn after the appropriation bills shall have been passed

Mr Townsend—I understand then that all ...atory motions shall be resorted to against this

Mr Conger—"When other bills come up we will answer that"

Mr Townsend—I want to repeat some words of the gentleman from Ohio, (Garfield,) When in a majority in this house he said that the action of the minority in legislation in seeking to delay action on bills is revolution, is the overthrow of popular government"

Mr Reed—"If you quote the language of the gentleman from Ohio more it will be a great improvement"

Mr Calkins—"There are a good many men on this side not entirely in sympathy with the gentleman from Michigan There are some who may be

Mr Humphrey—"Confounded few, (applause)

Mr Cox then made his speech in favor of the repeal of the jurors test oath and the house adjourned

GENERAL NEWS.

Ohio Democratic Convention

COLUMBUS, O, June 3—The hotels are fast filling up with delegates to the state democratic and greenback conventions which meet to morrow The contest for governor on the democratic ticket overshadows all other interests The fight at present is narrowed down to Rice and Bishop The friends of both candidates claiming it a sure thing for their champions, but Rice seems to have the greatest strength at this hour There is very little talk of a coalition with greenbackers Senator Thurman and Gen'l Ewing have telegraphed friends they will not attend the convention

The Joint Caucus

WASHINGTON, June 2—The democratic members of the house and senate held a joint caucus this afternoon in the hall of the house of representatives to receive the report of the joint advisory committee in regard to the appropriation bills. After several hours had been devoted to its consideration it was adopted with substantial unanimity The following is the programme agreed upon The house committee on appropriations will forthwith prepare for introduction three bills as follows 1st The army appropriation bill which was vetoed by the president, with the following new section to take the place of the section upon which the president based his veto Sec 6 That no money appropriated by this act is applicable or shall be paid for the subsistence, equipment, transportation or compensation of any part of the army of the United States to be used as a police force to preserve peace at the polls at any election held within any state

Second A bill extending the legislative executive and judicial appropriation act of June, 1879 for one year from the 30th inst, for the same sums and purposes therein specified except in regard to the apportionment of the clerical force now of the executive departments which is left to the discretion of the committee on appropriations Provision will also be made in this bill for salaries for certain offices created since the passage of the act which is to be extended The bill will contain no general legislation except that portion of the recently vetoed bill known as the McMahon amendment which provides for the repeal of certain laws regulating the payment of pensions, and directs the secretary of the treasury

The Situation in Ohio

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 2—The hotels are overflowing with delegates to the state democratic and greenback conventions which meet here to-morrow The interest centers on the nomination for governor Other candidates are attracting little attention This far the contest has been between General Rice and Governor Bishop This morning Rice men had things almost their own way but the rural delegates from the rural counties have materially increased Bishop's strength General Ewing's strength has increased materially This arises from the fact that he is the only man that there is any hope of the greenbackers will consent to run, and because he will be more acceptable to the supporters of both Rice and Bishop when it becomes evident that neither of these gentlemen can be nominated. But few of the friends of either Rice or Bishop admit the possibility of the defeat of their candidate, but each in turn admits Ewing's strength and that he will be the dark horse candidate and that he will be the man they can unite on better than anyone else

Judge Gillmore will be renominated for supreme judge and Anthony Howells for treasurer without opposition The platform will be substantially that of last year—In addition it will endorse the congressional action relating to the greenbacks

Prominent workers in the national greenback party held a conference to-night and with scarcely an exception opposed coalition with the democrats in the nomination of any candidate on the state ticket

JOB WORK.

A railroad is doing business in this state which has informed a court that it is not amenable to any of our state laws, and now openly proposes to resist the service of a writ of one of our courts if it is granted.

The San Francisco Chronicle has long been known as the supporter of Kearney. It has in fact, by its support, given him his prominence. It seems now to have changed its opinion and gives the following enjoyable notice of him: "It is doubtful if, in the history of any modern civilized community, such an ignoramus as Dennis Kearney ever before occupied public attention for so long a length of time, or monopolized so much newspaper space to the exclusion of more instructive matter. As a public speaker he is simply a fraud. Vile as his harrangues have been, most of them have been written for him or the contents have been suggested to him by other men, and often in a spirit of jest and waggery. He is incapable of talking common sense on any subject, and is as ignorant as he is conceited. 'I've got a greater mission than Jesus Christ ever had,' is his frequent boast. He is so destitute of the proprieties of life that no honest or decent man can long associate with him, except under compulsory circumstances. While palming himself off on the public as a reformer, he is a 'piece club man,' a corrupt demagouge a private interviewer of immensely rich men, and a taker of money."

Mr. Tillman, member of congress from South Carolina, recently wrote a letter, in which he expressed the following sentiments:

"At the worst, I hope and believe that our political oppression will cease very shortly after the inauguration of the next president. If the president be a democrat, it is reasonably certain that a majority of both houses of congress will also be democrats, or at least conservatives. If so, the reconstruction acts will speedily be repealed, which would leave suffrage where it constitutionally belongs, under control of the states. Then, admitting the coerced amendments of the constitution to be valid, the state could attach a property qualification to suffrage without violating those amendments, which would practically destroy negro suffrage as a disturbing element in the body politic. Again, after the democrats get possessesson of the executive and legislative departments, the present judges of the supreme court, following public opinion as law, in the future as in the past, and no longer dreading either impeachment or deprivation of salary, may declare the reconstruction acts, as well as the two fraudulent amendments, unconstitutional, null and void; or if they fail to do so the court can be reorganized simply by and increase of judges, even as the radicals did on a memorable occasion, and by making a proper appointment of new judges, the constitution of our fathers can be restored."

Before making any comment it is only fair that we should say that the Charleston News and Courier, the leading democratic paper in South Carolina repudiates the opinions it contains. Still however it does represent the feeling of a very respectable portion of the democratic party in the south, if not the majority. For this reason we publish it without any intention of doing injustice to many southerners who have accepted the results of the war in good faith. Certainly past experience shows that the south may do this. Directly after the war, the state governments organized at the beginning of Andrew Johnson's administration succeeded in defeating the 13th amendment which abolished slavery by the enactment of apprentice and other laws. If the south cannot directly abolish the constitutional amendments, it may do so indirectly, as indicated above. It therefore becomes a very serious question whether a party should be put in power which contains among its members in good and regular standing men who hold views similar to those of Mr. Tillman. Certainly it cannot be done without danger of unsettling those questions which were supposed to have been settled forever by the war.

The Nation gives the following item: "The city of Emporia—Ks.—issued legally and correctly bonds dated May 21, 1872, and paid the coupons on them for two years. In 1875 they voted to repudiate the debt. The city is growing, and in good condition financially, but pleased with their effort of 1872 they have just voted to issue another large lot of bonds." We are glad the Nation gave this item, which we understand to be correct. And we wish to add our emphatic denunciation of such dishonesty. Such proceedings have been the curse of the west. A few communities have been enabled to borrow money which they never intended to pay, and thus have compelled the state in which they are situated to pay from 5 to 10 per cent, more for loans. The farmers of Kansas must not blame the bloated bondholders and merciless capitalists for the high rate of interest they are paying, but the dishonesty of Emporia and like cities. In Pueblo county, of this state, we have a like example—the bad faith of this county toward its bondholders of one class goes a great deal to depress a healthy confidence in all Colorado securities and in raising the rate of interest. The county now has sufficient in government bonds, the proceeds of the sale of P. & N. V. and D. & R. G. stock, to pay two-thirds of the bonded debt. But it tells the bondholders they must scale the debt one-third, or they will not receive anything. Meanwhile the interest on the government bonds, amounting to over $10,000 per annum, will be used by the county to fight the bondholders in the courts and prevent them from compelling the county to keep its promises. It is much to be regretted that such a policy should be pursued, and the press of the state should denounce it so as to show capitalists in the east that this policy is not dictated by the average honesty of the state.

TWO EXCELLENT MAGAZINES.

Appleton's Journal for June lies before us, and presents the following table of contents: "The Shakespearian Myth," Second Paper. The Appeal to History, by Appleton Morgan; "The Literature of the Victorian Reign," First Survey, by Justin McCarthy; "The Reaction of Genius," a tale by W. M. Baker; "Las Casas," from the Spanish of Emilio Castelar; "A Chapter from Froude's Cæsar;" "The Seamy Side," a novel, Chapters IV to VI, by Walter Besant and James Rice; "Some Aspects of the Present French Republic;" "On Chinese Fans;" "The Bayadere," a sonnet, by F. S. Saltus. Then follow the editorial departments. The editor writes of Imitation in Art, Realism, "L'Assommoir, and its Moral," and presents in this department some reminiscences, by General Maury, of the late General Taylor. There is a full department of book reviews.

The Princeton Review for May-June comes to us as a most welcome guest. The discussions in this standard periodical are noted for their dignity and timeliness. The soundest scholars and best thinkers in the conservative ranks, both in this country and in Europe, contribute to this review. The articles presented by it upon theology, philosophy, politics, science, literature and art are always worthy of a perusal as embodying the matured deliberations of men famed in each of these departments of human thought.

The present number of the Princeton Review opens with a strong paper by President Noall Porter, of Yale, on "Force, Law and Design," which is followed by a very readable and instructive article entitled "Continental Painting in Paris in 1878" by Philip Gilbert Hamilton, the famous art critic. "University Work in America" is discussed by Prof. R. L. Gildersleeve, of the John Hopkins University, in which discussion the question, Does university work differ from college in kind or degree, or in both? is carefully considered.

Mr. Balfour Stewart, LL. D., of Manchester, gives a second article, complementary to his first in the review for September, 1878, on "Science and the Future State," in which he strives to show that there is in reality no irrepressible conflict between science and religion, the Rev. Dr. Francis F. Patton, of Chicago, follows with a discussion of "The Final Philosophy."

The remaining articles are as follows: "The Critical Estimate of Mosaism," by the Rev. Alfred Cave, D. D., of England; "The Idea of Cause," by Prof. Francis Brown, of Harvard; "A Plea for Free Trade," by Arthur Arnold, of London, and "The Supremacy of Conscience and of Revelation," by Lyman H. Atwater, D. D., of Princeton.

It will be seen that this number of the review is especially rich in papers on philosophy and theology and that it is an especially valuable volumn.

... of the loss of your son ... Taylor sent to Washington ... to endeavor to procure some modification of the rigid incarceration of his boy, who was his mother's ... and his warm friend. It was a bold ... to ask favor of an old ... in Washington then. But President ... soon but one plausible Taylor ... final and positive views impressed him ... and pleasant relations sprung up between them. One day he called on the president, who said to him gravely: "General, a gentleman came to see me ... to have you arrested." "O, Mr. President! why, what does he wish you to do?" "He says you tried to hang ... in Louisiana for being a Union man ... the war." "Mr. President, he has ... to you, Sir." "Why, General, did you hang Union men in Louisiana?" "Yes, I hanged many Union men in Louisiana ... who were spies and traitors to our ... and in our army, but I never ... to hang one that I did not ... it, and so ... your complainant ... have lied to you." "Soon after this President Johnson released Mr. Davis from the casemate in Fortress Monroe, and gave Gen. Taylor a pass to visit ... Being in England several years ago, ... the president's son he was the guest of the Prince of Wales at Sandringham. And ... American who has ever been in England received more marked personal courtesy from the English nobility than the military prestige as a successful commander added to the claims ... his birth, and both were enhanced by ... audacious wit, which feared not "King ... Kaiser," all making him the most noble guest of London that year. Being invited to a lunch of the Fishmongers' company, he there heard some sharp criticisms of Virginia because of her slowness in paying her debt. Taylor was by descent entirely a Virginian, and was proud of his ancestry, and he promptly arose to repel these imputations, and his remarks, full of strong sense and justice, so impressed the audience that after the banquet was over he was waited upon with a request to meet and confer with a committee of the principal holders of Virginia bonds in London as to the best plan of compromise of their claims, and finally was empowered to submit to the government of Virginia a proposition from the holders of $10,000,000 of the Virginia bonds, not very different from that recently accepted by that state. Had his counsels prevailed, much trouble and scandal to Virginia would have been averted. He left Richmond chagrined and despondent as to the result of the efforts of those who were in favor of maintaining the credit of the state. It is related of him that during the Derby races the prince of Wales took him to his own (the prince's) stand, and as they were ascending the stair the duke of Edinburgh came hastily up and said: "O Wales! do you know Forrester is booked to win?" "Oh, yes," said the prince, "the general and I have just been in the betting stand and laid 50 guineas each on him." Turning to Taylor, the duke said: "Now, won't you please go to the stand and lay 50 guineas for me on him?" "Pardon me, your highness," said Taylor, "the stand is quite as near to you as to me." "I am so glad you told Edinburgh that," said the prince. "What a deal of cheek he has to be asking my guests to lay his bets for him!" Taylor had a sincere respect and liking for the prince, and a hearty contempt for the duke of Edinburgh, whom he snubbed on more than one occasion. Apart from the personal character of the duke, he was only second son of a queen, while Taylor was the only son of a real president of the United States. —Appletons' Magazine.

Jack-stones and the Probability of Chances.

In the classic world, girls used the astragali or hucklebones as playthings, tossing them up and catching them on the back of the hand; and to this day we see groups of girls in England at this ancient game, reminding us of the picture by Alexander of Athens, in the Naples museum, of the five goddesses at play. It was also noticed that these bones fall in four ways, with the flat, concave, convex, or sinuous side up, so that they form natural dice, and as such they have been from ancient times gambled with accordingly. In India, nature provides certain five-sided nuts that answer the purpose of dice. Of course, when the sides are alike, they must be marked or numbered, as with the four-sided stick-dice of India, and that which tends to supersede all others, the six-sided kubos, which gave the Greek geometers the name for the cube. Since the old Aryan period many a broken gamester has cursed the hazard of the die. We moderns are apt to look down with mere contempt at his folly. But we judge the ancient gamester too harshly if we forget that his passion is mixed with those thoughts of luck or fortune or superhuman intervention, which form the very mental atmosphere of the sooth-sayer and the oracle-prophet. With devout prayer and sacrifice he would propitiate the deity who should give him winning throws; nor, indeed, in our own day have such hopes and such appeals ceased among the uneducated. To the educated it is the mathematical theory of probabilities that has shown the folly of the gamester's staking his fortune on his powers of divination. But it must be borne in mind that this theory itself was, so to speak, shaken out of the dice-box. When the gambling Chevalier de Mere put the question to Pascal in how many throws he ought to get double-sixes, and Pascal solving the problem, started the mathematical calculation of chances, this laid the foundation of the scientific system of statistics which more and more regulates the arrangements of society. This accurate method was applied to the insurance table, which enables a man to hedge against his ugliest risks, to eliminate his chances of fire and death by betting that he shall have a new roof over his head and a provision for his widow. Of all the wonderful turns of the human mind in the course of culture, scarce any is more striking than this history of lots and dice. Who, in the Middle Ages, could have guessed what would be its next outcome, that magic sunk into sport should rise again as science, and man's failure to define the future should lead him to success in controlling it? —The Fort-nightly Review.

President Hayes and several members of his cabinet will attend the commencement of Hampton college, Virginia, next Wednesday.

Conflicting Emotions.

It was in the third race yesterday. King Faro had won the first heat and Ella Rowett the second. "Oh, I know King Faro will win the third," exclaimed a demure, diminutive damsel, aroused for an instant into enthusiasm by the excitement of the occasion. Thereupon the young man by her side challenged her with, "Will you bet me your hand against?" "Against a box of candy? Yes, for I know there is not the slightest danger of my losing." The heat was a close one, and when King Faro came under the string a nose ahead of his game little opponent, the pretty and demure, diminutive damsel impulsively cried out, "Oh, that mean old Faro!" But the next instant she was blushing as red as some of the jockeys' jackets and applauding King Faro like a little hurricane.—Courier-Journal.

PERSONAL.

The actress Modjeska will sail for Europe next Thursday. Her husband has filed a declaration that he intends to become an American citizen.

Queen Victoria on leaving her private hotel at Baveno, Italy, gave to the wife of the proprietor a bracelet in brilliants worth $1,000, says the Paris Globe.

George Bancroft will soon leave Washington for Newport, where he will be a citizen, having in years past been a citizen of Massachusetts, of New York and of the District of Columbia.

Legal proceedings have been commenced by the nephews of Pius IX, against the executors of their uncle, Cardinals Sacconi, Mertel and Monaco La Valetta, to have the will declared invalid.

The Princess Louise is occupying herself in designing and inlaying a mantelpiece of different sorts of wood. Very recently she was reported as painting a portrait of Mrs. Scott Siddons, and we shall probably hear next that she is crocheting a bedquilt.

Governor Bishop, of Ohio, distinguished himself last week in Columbus by chasing and overtaking a horse thief who had just plundered a lady in his company. The white-headed governor, racing at the top of his speed, yelling "Stop thief!" was a spectacle that caused a commotion.

In a recently republished essay Mr. Gladstone describes Blanco White as feeding upon Unitarianism in the manner that a "starving garrison makes a banquet upon a supply of garbage." A Unitarian minister having written to Mr. Gladstone with reference to the statement, the latter replied that the essay was penned thirty-five years ago, and that "republication is far from being reaffirmation."

Concerning the late Mrs. Landor, widow of Walter Savage Landor it is said that she married the poet at the age of 16 years, after having already refused two brilliant offers—one from a person of distinguished rank, the other from one of the richest commoners in England. She was descended from an ancient Swiss family, and Landor used to call her "the little baroness." Their married life was not long happy, and the crowning quarrel came in 1874, when Landor, considering it necessary to depart from England, found that his wife objected to the step. On that occasion, in the presence of her younger sister, she twitted him with the disparity between their ages, and he never forgave her for it.

Ezekiel Hayes the great-grandfather of the president, was a successful mechanic in Connecticut, and kept a number of apprentices. It is said that sometimes, like apprentices in all ages, they felt that they had long work and short rations. At one time a new cheese was put on the table whole. It stood uncut for a day or two, Hayes saying at each meal, "That is a nice looking cheese. It is a pity to cut it." The boys thought this was growing rather monotonous, and planned to show their sentiments. The blacksmith had one day got a bar of iron nicely heated, and laid it across the iron anvil to cut the proper lengths. The boys, with chisel and sledges were to cut it off. But no hand was raised. Hayes asked why they did not "strike." One of them replied: "That is such a nice bar of iron; it would be a pity to cut it." Hayes quickly saw the point and shouted, with a laugh, "Strike! boys, strike! the cheese shall be cut!"

The crystal waters of the Cottonwood River, abundant with trout, come dashing and sparkling down past the door of the Sanitarium from its fountain head, the eternal beds of snow which cap the hoary old mountain.

The La Plata Miner is to be enlarged to a seven column paper this week.

One of the pupils in the Deaf-mute institute engraves with considerable skill.

The Western Union telegraph office has been moved to the Emma house, on Huerfano street, west of Tejon.

Dr. B. P. Anderson has removed his office from Huerfano street to his residence, corner Pike's Peak and Nevada avenues.

The Alamosa Independent is taking the lives of two or three of the town's best business men every week, biographically of course.

Marshal Beall arrested C. C. Lee yesterday on a warrant from a Canon City magistrate. Lee is charged with larceny, and will be sent to Canon City for trial.

A man named Hiram J. Ferguson was found yesterday morning sick and starving in a cabin on Stray Horse gulch. He was removed to the hospital. Leadville Reveille.

A calf with a foot shaped like a hand is the very latest Texas curiosity. We have seen a foot with a calf, shaped like a but that doesn't explain the other phenomenon after all.

The election in Monument, last Wednesday, on the question of incorporating the town, resulted in a handsome majority in favor of the measure. There was a good deal of rejoicing over the result.

In the Rosita murder case, Howcutt, one of the accused, has been released, and the burden of the crime thrown upon the notorious E. A. Eggleston, who seems to have planned both to murder Connett, and to throw the blame on Howcutt.

A man is wandering about New Jersey towns who is regarded as a lunatic because he thinks he is a mule. Exchange.

How true it is that humility and an application of the motto "Know thyself," are never appreciated by an ignorant and cruel world.

Seven men were arrested in Deadwood, on the 19th, charged with hanging a man, and the man said to have been hanged filed the complaint. It strikes us that it will go hard with those seven men as the complainant was an eye-witness of their crime.

Several persons continued to irrigate their gardens with Holly water last night, determined not to be bluffed off by the rain. One woman whose husband was out of town, was out irrigating and holding an umbrella over her head to protect it from the storm. Denver Times.

Opposition is the life of trade.

It is stated that Miss Cleora Bale, after whom the new town of Cleora was named, will be editorially connected with the Chaffee County Courier, whose first issue will be presented some time the present week. She is an intelligent young lady and will do her part toward making the Courier a success.

A bet of fifty dollars against thirty has just been made that Leo, the accomplished gymnast and fearless fireman, will at four o'clock, this afternoon undertake the precarious feat of ascending to the top of a twenty six foot ladder with two of our heaviest city officials upon his shoulders, and reach its top and return to the sidewalk within twenty-six seconds. Leadville Reveille.

This feat was not accomplished as the heavy weights feared they might come to the sidewalk in less than twenty-six seconds.

Two Tramps Trapped.

Two of the happy family of eight tramps, discharged from the county jail last Monday morning, have again fallen into trouble.

These gentry were very anxious to obtain work when they were discharged and Mr. G. O. Pearce employed three of them to work on the toll road now building to Crystal Park. Mr. Pearce purchased new blankets for the trio and saw them safely at work by three o'clock Monday afternoon.

Yesterday morning he went to call his industrious employes, but, alas! two of them had folded their nice, new blankets like the Arabs and silently stolen away. As may readily be inferred they had also stolen the blankets.

Constable Clark was detailed to capture the men, and pursued two fellows answering to their description about ten miles on the road to Pueblo. When he overtook them he found they were not the individuals he desired to interview. On his return he saw the fellows he was after walking leisurely along the railroad track, bound south.

"I guess you've gone about far enough," said the officer. The men looked at him a moment, sighed deeply, and without a word turned around and sauntered slowly back to Colorado Springs.

They occupied their old apartments in the jail last night, and will appear before Justice Stewart for trial this morning.

Personal.

Mr. John Harvey returned from Leadville yesterday.

The Rev. J. F. Walker, rector of Christ's church, has returned from his southern tour.

The Rev. J. Martyn Hayt, of London, will leave for Denver shortly, to accept the pastoral charge of St. John's church in that city. He will arrive in about three weeks.

We received a pleasant call yesterday from Mr. J. M. North, county judge of Boulder county. Judge North is now on his wedding trip. He has received the congratulations of many of our prominent citizens with whom he is acquainted, and in these congratulations we heartily join.

The Youthful Hose.

The G. S. Barnes juvenile hose company come on strong yesterday afternoon. The little fellows dashed about town in full uniform with their handsome machine, and created a great deal of excitement.

We are sorry to say that the W. S. Jackson hose company backed down when they saw that the boys meant business, and closed up their hose in a contest of speed. The lads were much disgusted at such conduct, and took a little run all alone. They aver that in this race they beat the Cheyenne boys' time by a large majority.

The Compositor Ahead.

The Deaf-Mute Index prints the following dialogue in which it seems to us the compositor's imagination excelled; however, like a good compositor he agreed with the editor. One evening, the Index editor acompanied by two of the compositors walked out of the Institute grounds. Suddenly they saw a black cow with white on her back. One of the compositors said to the editor, See the cow with snow on her back. I believe she has just come from Pike's Peak. "Oh, I suppose she has just jumped over the moon," said the editor. "I think so!" replied the compositor.

Developing the San Juan.

The La Plata Miner speaks as follows of the San Juan bullion company: "This company which has proven itself the most enterprising one operating at Animas Forks, is pushing the work of development upon its property on the head waters of the Animas with its usual vim. They are working a force on the Loma and have a drift in over 100 feet, and have a large pay streak of galena ore. The company also has a force at work on the Fountain lode, and the mine is looking well. The company will resume work on the Prince of Wales soon, by tunnel, which they will run to tap the vein at a depth of over 200 feet. They will put in machinery this season which will consist of smelting works that are now being manufactured in the east. The company is certainly deserving of credit for the enterprise it is displaying.

Copperville Silver.

A correspondent of the Pueblo Democrat describes the rush to Copperville, a comparatively new mining camp, as follows:

"They softly lie and sweetly sleep
Low in the ground."

I mean the Horn silver, Gray copper, galena, &c., which are making the district around Copperville so interesting to all seeking a fortune in the great mineral field in and around Silver Cliff.

The town of Copperville is situated thirteen miles north of Silver Cliff, on the bottom land between Texas and Grape Creeks, and bids fair to rival any other specific locality in this vast mineral deposit.

The road leading from the Cliff to Copperville is filled with men and teams crowding forward with all the speed possible in order to not be too late to "locate" in the most desirable localities.

Copperville is one of the permanent fixtures of Custer county, and is bound to grow and take rank with her best towns.

Her incorporators, Alonzo Tubbs, A. J. Parry and others are men of means and any quantity of vim necessary to give prominence to whatever enterprise they undertake. The two gentlemen above named are the pioneer miners of this district and have some of the best claims in the country, of which we will mention the Old South Mine, The Sulphic, &c. Old South Mine is now down forty feet and is getting better at every foot added to her depth. The proprietors have numerous assays from her ores the lowest of which is sixty-five dollars to the ton.

The Sulphic mine has an assay of forty-two ounces at five feet from the surface and growing in richness as they progress downward.

What is true of these two mines is true of all this locality, and out people who contemplate seeking their fortune in the mining business, could not do better than to head for Copperville where the good Lord has done every thing possible for the interests of man, and I believe our people will not fail to avail themselves of the rich and priceless blessings set before them.

Railroad Controversy

DELAYED.

A dispatch from Alamosa states that Judge Bowen has postpoued the hearing of arguments in the injunction case until Friday at Alamosa.

ALONG THE LINE.

The Atchison road are in a terrible fright and are making every preparation to resist the injunction of Judge Bowen if it shall be granted. Armed men are pouring in from Kansas. Most of them are stationed at Pueblo and Canon City. It has been estimated that about 50 of them have been stationed in and around the depot in this city.

Freight trains have been stopped greatly to the inconvenience of the inhabitants along the line of the D. & R. G. There is no good reason for this, and this is cause enough for the state to commence legal warfare on the road.

A member of company B was asked yesterday in Denver if his company would be ready for duty if called upon. As the Atchison railroad is the only party that proposes to resist the courts, the troops will be probably used against them.

If you go down to the depot, don't look around much or you will be a "marked man."

A special went tearing through here last night on the way to Denver. It was said to be a mud train, containing the counsel of the Atchison road, and bearing merchandise labelled Tribune.

THE ATTACK ON ONE OF OUR JUDGES.

The Atchison company has been making an unfair and unjust legal warfare for some time, but it has now commenced a mean and cowardly warfare in its base and unwarranted attack on Judge Bowen. The charges were so offensively made, that the counsel of the Atchison road could not have expected their motion to be granted, and the only explanation for their conduct is that they desired to raise doubts about the judicial integrity of Judge Bowen so as to lessen the moral effect of his injunction if he granted any, and direct public attention from the real questions at issue. It was a mean, cowardly act, which no attorney with any claim to respectability should perform. It was a purely personal attack that has nothing in reality to do with the case. It is an attempt to divert public attention from the weakness of their case, by making false and unwarranted attacks on a judge whose whole official career in this state has been above suspicion.

The only possible ground for these charges that Judge Bowen would not decide impartially is that he recently overruled a motion to quash the quo warranto made on the ground that the attorney general did not have power to bring the proceeding. This decision of Judge Bowen was based on an able opinion supported by a large number of authorities and has been generally approved by the best legal talent in the state. The Atchison counsel then demurred on the same grounds on which they moved to quash, and at their own instance Judge Bowen entered judgment of ouster, overruling the demurrer. There is certainly nothing in this to warrant any charges whatever. There is a marked contrast between this action of the Atchison company and that of the Rio Grande company. It would indeed be a sad state of affairs if every litigant suffering or expecting a defeat should charge a court with prejudice and corruption. Such conduct can only be explained by improper motives, want of confidence in their own case, and as a last resort.

We might add a word in regard to the official standing of Judge Bowen. There is certainly no district judge in the state whose decisions have been more uniformly upheld by an appellant court. It is well known that Judge Bowen has had many intricate mining cases in San Juan and Lake county, yet none of his decisions in these cases have been overruled. We believe the only case when Judge Bowen has been overruled was when he erred on the side of equity in a purely technical question. In the face of such a record, the people will be loath to believe the charges of counsel who have the reputation of being reckless, and who have justified this reputation by recent acts.

Vacation of the Deaf-Mute Institute.

The Deaf-mute institute closed for the summer vacation yesterday, a week sooner than usual. The examinations which occur at the close of the term were omitted, because of the illness of the principal.

The next session of the school will begin on Wednesday, September 10th. When the new building is completed there will be ample room for all those in the state who may be entitled to receive the benefits of the school.

We take pleasure in giving the following editorial, from the Deaf-mute Index, a place in our columns, as it sketches the work of the term just concluded and closes with some suggestions, to which we call the especial attention of those who contemplate sending children to the institute. The Index says:

"Vacation has come sooner than was expected, and great is the joy of all. We have every reason to be thankful that the health of the pupils has been uniformly good during the entire session. Of course we have not been entirely exempt from sickness, but not a single serious case has occurred. The result is due in a great measure to the faithful care and attention which the pupils have received from the officers in charge, who, notwithstanding the crowded condition of the building, have so managed matters that every slight case of sickness has received immediate and careful attention, and thus insured speedy recovery. Too much praise can not be accorded our faithful matron and her assistant, and parents who sent their little ones here will fully appreciate the care which they have received. The location of the institute is also conducive to health, and by the time for the reopening of school we will have much more room, and will be also supplied with an abundance of good pure water. Let all come who are entitled to the benefits of the school.

It must be remembered that our school has been in existence only a few years, has had many difficulties to contend with, principally the lack of sufficient room, but all things considered, we are gratified with the evidences of proficiency shown. The Advanced class consists of 11 pupils, and the Primary 13, of whom 6 entered school at or since the fall term opened. The class in articulation consists of 6, of whom one-half are semi-mutes, and the others deaf-mutes. All have made satisfactory progress. Lessons in penmanship were given once a week, and those pupils whose tastes were so inclined were permitted to practice drawing and sketching. One of the pupils has acquired considerable proficiency in engraving on wood, as the sketches which have appeared in the Index from time to time abundantly testify. With proper encouragement and instruction we have no doubt but that he could make his mark as an engraver.

The Index office claims a little attention. The office has given instruction in plain "news" composition to seven pupils, six boys and one girl. Three of the boys have acquired sufficient knowledge of the business to entitle them to classification as "journeymen" printers. The others have not been in the office long, but can set pretty well. The printing office is properly a branch of the educational department, and those who work in it acquire a good knowledge of language, besides learning a useful trade for self-support when graduated from school.

In conclusion we hope parents will send their children here at the beginning of the session and permit them to remain until the close of the same. This is necessary in order to keep the members of each of the classes as nearly even as possible in their studies. The practice of taking a pupil out of school for a few weeks or not bringing him here until weeks after the session begins, of taking him out before it closes, works great and lasting injury to him, and parents should remember it when they think of asking permission for their children to go home during the school term.

Prospective Amusements.

Our city will be visited by a number of first class companies during the coming summer. Manager N. C. Forrester of Denver, informs us that it is his intention to visit Colorado Springs before long with a superior minstrel troupe. Among the members of this combination are Barlow, Wilson, West Primrose, Australian and Californian favorites.

Mr. Forrester also promises us an opportunity of hearing the celebrated Standard and Fifth Avenue H. M. S. Pinafore company.

These two entertainments are definitely promised, with the general assurance that other companies of merit will be forthcoming.

We make these announcements with pleasure, and judging from the reception given to meritous companies by our citizens in the past, we promise him a successful season.

Religion in Leadville.

Mining towns are not as a general thing very religious but the very difficulty of the task will always arouse some zealous missionary and induce him to undertake the work of conversion. The Leadville Chronicle thus describes such a man:

A good many folk in Leadville who never go much to church, nor say many prayers on their knees, nor who fear much of any thing but that they won't strike silver, a good many such as these know Thomas A. Uzzell by sight, but do not know that he is a religious teacher and a pastor of one of our city churches. He is, but he didn't use to be. Last night he told a Chronicle reporter that a few years ago he was about the worst drunkard and the most expert gambler that ever walked.

He ran up full of all sorts of wickedness, and when he became converted a few years ago and wanted to learn to read and be a minister of the gospel, he had to go to work in a barber shop to pay his board while he studied.

He finally got through a preliminary course of study and came to Leadville on the first day of February, 1878. He was the first minister in camp. Up to that time there had never been Christian services of any kind held in Leadville. He landed here in the evening. There were not so many lodging houses then as now, and the young minister could find nowhere to lay his head. He hunted all over camp and finally found an empty dry goods box, in which he placed his blankets and set out to "get up a meeting." Securing a little log cabin then and now standing at the rear of the Grand Hotel for a "church," he began to drum up an audience. He called at every gambling house, saloon and dance house then in the city, and told the gamblers and the girls and the liquor men that he wanted them all to come out to his meeting. They all thought he was fooling them into some sort of a side den or show, and many a joke was cracked at the young minister's expense. Some offered him grog, and others a seat at a gambling table; but when night came the little log cabin was filled.

He preached in this house every night for four weeks and then the present Methodist church was commenced. It cost two thousand dollars, a large share of which was subscribed and paid by the gamblers and saloon men. The church was commenced March 1st, a year ago, and dedicated, free of debt, on the 7th day of July following. The society now numbers one hundred and thirty members. The congregation having outgrown the original capacity of the house an addition is being added which will give the house a seating capacity of over six hundred. Mr. Uzzell is a young man, not more than thirty, and he is plucky. He works like a hero. His business or calling is the salvation of souls. The majority of souls in Leadville do not care about being saved not just now and the young clergyman meets with many discouragements. He calls many furious experiences with bunko men and dance house devotees. His plan is to seek out the most depraved and then go for their souls with all his might. They try every way to shake him off, but he hangs like a true Christian, and many a conversion has thus been made. One thing is certain, there is not a thief, nor a bunko, not a gambler, nor a courtesan in the city who does not respect the young Methodist clergyman. Let him be insulted on the streets, or in a dance house or gambling den and somebody will get hurt right away.

JOB WORK.

The public must not be diverted from the real question by cowardly affidavits.

Ex-Governor Hendricks seems to be the the most prominent candidate for the position of secretary of war.

We see by yesterday morning's Tribune that the special mud train that went through here at the rate of forty miles an hour on Tuesday night was loaded.

The Louisiana constitutional convention by a vote of 81 to 21 has adopted a provision against sectarian appropriations. This is right. There should be no semblance of a union between church and state in this country.

Ex-Senator Barnum is circulating 20,000 copies of Senator Eaton's state rights speech with a view of preventing his re-election. The republicans were about to do the same thing though for a different purpose, and are accordingly very grateful to the ex-chairman of the democratic congressional committee.

Senator Logan is said to have given up his greenback foolishness, which was the result, as he confessed, of two weeks' study. His two years' exemption from public life must have been improved in study. We would now recommend that he take up the English grammar and some good work on rhetoric.

The attorney general has asked the question whether a corporation shall do business in this state which does not consider itself amenable to our laws. The recently publicly announced policy of the Atchison road has resolved the real question at issue to this form: Shall a corporation do business in this state that defies the orders of our courts? Most people won't see any impropriety in asking such questions.

The Tribune correspondents (Messrs. Reed and Teller) at Alamosa say that Judge Bowen "showed considerable feeling about the affidavit." This may be true, but there is certainly no need of it. The aim and unscrupulous action of the Atchison counsel are too transparent. It wont injure Judge Bowen, but will injure the Atchison cause throughout the state. It will act like a boomerang as the Belford scandal did in the last campaign. Judge Bowen's character is secure against any such attacks.

The fact that all but ten democrats voted for the Warner silver bill, and that all but four republicans voted against it makes it essentially a democratic measure. This is very unsatisfactory to the sensible hard money democratic papers of the east. The Richmond State thus vigorously expresses its opinion on this subject: "What the democracy expect to gain we fail to discover. We thought they had had enough of coquetting with these money maniacs, and would in future leave the currency alone and to settle itself on some fixed basis, if they could not retrace their steps and undo the evils they have done in remonetizing the silver. They tried consorting with greenbackers and silverists last fall, and through their folly came very nigh loosing the house; and if they persist in this wild and senseless course, they will not only lose that next year, but the presidency also."

If the opinion of ex-Senator Alcorn (Rep.) of Mississippi be correct, the negro is not likely to make a success in the west. He says labor is abundant at fair remuneration, but the negro is averse to hard work. He illustrates the effect of this laziness in the following manner: "Three years since I sold at fifteen cents per acre, cash, one thousand acres of land fronting on the Mississippi River, a good wood-yard and finely timbered. This land, which brought me $150, had cost before the war twelve thousand dollars. To-day the land is unoccupied. I would not receive it back at two cents per acre. The trouble lies in the fact that it is heavily timbered. Clearing, fencing and building houses is work, and hard work." Except in regard to his political rights, he says the negro is well treated. Regarding democratic methods of violating the political rights of the negro, he says, with irony: "Ballot-box stuffing in this state, while equally effective, is more humane than the bull-dozing, shot gun policy of the past. In this I take pleaure in recording an improvement."

We have frequently had occasion to allude to the encouraging fact that respectable silver advocates in the west and honest opponents of the silver legislation of 1877-78 in the east, are now holding quite harmonious views. The Cincinnati Commercial, the most vigorous silver paper in 1877-78 in the west, says the Warner silver bill is "an attack under false pretenses on resumption." This seems to be the general opinion of all parties in favor of resumption and honest money. The difference between honest bi-metallists east and west has been purely in regard to methods. Both believe in the use of gold and silver as currency circulating side by side, but were not united in the methods by which this should be brought about. The united opposition to the Warner bill shows an approach toward agreement in method. It has settled among other things that in the present monetary condition of the world there is not to be free and unlimited coinage of silver; that no silver bill will pass which is inimical to resumption and favorable to bullion holders; and that the national faith is to be preserved. This conservative view of the question takes away any peril which there might otherwise be in the restoration of the double standard to this country. The fact that this restoration will be without peril to our finances appears now to be as assured as the restoration of the double standard itself.

If the injunction and order are issued, as we have no doubt they will be, we believe it will be resisted. Then what? No sheriff in the country can enforce it. Any one can tell what the next step will be, and then what about the matter of cost in enforcing the decree? This is one of the items of expense which the thousand-dollar bond won't cover, and that no man can measure. Denver Times.

The above item of the Times is of interest to the people of this state. It is another public announcement that the A., T. & S. F. Co. intend to resist our laws. That the Times should have the bareface effrontery to speak so confidently and without adverse comment of such lawlessness is one of the most astonishing features of the whole business. A while ago when it was rumored that the management of the Denver & Rio Grande company intended to take back their road, the Times was filled with the most conservative articles about obeying the courts and taking no action unwarranted by law. Though it turned out that the Denver & Rio Grande Co. had no intention of doing what was charged, still it would have been a light offense compared with what the Times says the Atchison road intends to do. In one case the party without waiting for the courts would have taken back his property which was unjustly and illegally held by another, while in the other case, it is open opposition to lawful authority. There can certainly be no excuse or justification for the latter. Has it come to such a pass in this state that a corporation can openly talk of defying our courts and be tacitly approved in so doing by respectable papers? If this is so, it is time for the people of the state to enquire whether the presence of such a corporation in our state is for the interest of political purity and good order.

Our dispatches of yesterday show that the democrats have finally agreed on some action in relation to the appropriation bills. We do not see how they have improved the matter. The sections added to the bill simply in fact prevent the president from executing certain laws which, in the bills vetoed, were repealed. It is a poor attempt to dodge the vetoes. How the president will act, we do not know, but congress certainly puts him in a very anomalous condition. The statutes of the United States contain certain laws which he has sworn to execute. Congress in effect says, "You shall not execute these laws," and effectually takes away the means for his doing so. This is the same in principle as though congress were to decline to make all appropriations for the execution of laws. We do not see why the same reasons which urged President Hayes to veto the other appropriation bills should not also induce him to veto the new ones. The most dangerous method of opposing a law is to prevent its execution. Every law should be either enforced or repealed. As the latter does not appear possible the former must be done. The only action of the democracy that will be satisfactory to the country is a square back-down from the positions taken. This is the view taken by many democrats, as may be seen from the following extract from the New Orleans Picayune: "It is not a question of who shall be the sufferers. It is a question of law, of justice and of morals. We may think that in such a controversy law and justice and morals would be on our side, but the country may have a very different opinion. The public might say that, however dangerous may be the republican view of the propriety and expediency of military intervention at the polls, at least there is patriotism enough and strength enough in the people to prevent any serious consequences from the practical application of the theory. But to refuse supplies to carry on the government is a process which is fraught with danger, and which has never been resorted to except when public liberty was threated by unscrupulous and tyrannical executive."

Sherman Ahead.

The local leaders here have joined in the statement that the convention would sound the key-note of the next presidential campaign, which, according to them, would on the republican side have to be fought by either Sherman or Grant. If this be true Ohio must be regarded as equally divided between her "favorite son," the secretary of the treasury, and the ex-president of the United States. In other words the convention, consisting of over 500 representative republicans of Ohio, resulted in the nomination of Charles Foster by a majority of 9 votes and 4-6ths of a vote over Alphonso Taft, who was supposed to be the representative of Grant. *N.
